

ABSTRACT

5 A dispensing device for substances including personal care, cosmetics, and medicinal substances is described. The device dispenses a metered amount of a substance by actuation of a push button which indirectly contacts an advancable shaft, thereby driving a piston to push the substance from a reservoir into an applicator. The device can be operated in one hand of a person and is devoid of any twist or rotation mechanism.